WHEN PA IS SICK—

When Pa is sick he's scared to death. And Ma an' us just hold our breath. He crawls in bed in bed, an' puffs and grunts, And does all kinds of crazy stunts. He wants Doc Brown and mighty quick For when Pa's ill, he's awful sick. He gasps and groans, and sort of sighs, He talks queer and rolls his eyes. Ma jumps an' runs and all of us, An' all the house is in a fuss. An' peace and joy is mighty scarce— When Pa is sick, it's something fierce.

Mrs. Martha D. Womack Married.
We noticed in the Lexington Herald last week that Mrs. Martha D. Womack formerly of this place, had married at Millersburg. We were at Beatyville when we noticed the account of the wedding and clipped it but have misplaced it. We can say, however, that the gentleman she married is a very prominent business man and stands high in that community. We can not recall the name. The wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Perry, at Winchester. Mrs. Perry is a cousin of Mrs. Womack.

Commonwealth's Attorney G. C. Alford last week bought the Caskey farm just east of town and will move there soon. J. W. and W. A. Caskey had recently sold the farm to C. A. Franklin and he sold it to Mr. Allen. We did not learn the consideration.

Baseball Game.
The West Liberty High School basketball team (team played a game with Ashland at the latter place last Friday, the score being 50 to 10 in favor of the Ashland High School. The Ashland team is a crack team and the West Liberty team was hand-capped by the fact that this was their first indoor game, their practice having been outdoors. They played a good game and were complimented by Ashland papers. Those who went in charge of Prof. S. H. McGuire were: Glenn McClain, Drexel Moore, Curtis Mathis, Elmer Howard, F. Ward Delamy, Olney Barker, Lucian Reed and Walter Oldfield. Fast Arnett, West Liberty's most noted gentleman, went all night to see the game.

A spirit of optimism is growing in the business world. The business in this nation is too immense to lay dormant and in spite of the depressing effect of the Republican policy there is a noticeable improvement in many lines of trade.

We predicted what the effect of the 19th amendment would be. Men haven't a chance now. All our occupations are in danger. At Grand Rapids, Mich., a bank has been robbed by a woman. Even the hazardous occupations are being usurped by the women.

Royalty has its disadvantages. For instance. A great many of the royal attendants at the wedding of Princess Mary rented the costumes they wore from pawnbrokers. In this neck of the woods if we haven't the regulation garments we wear overalls to the weddings of our friends.

Every citizen of Morgan county should take a drive out on the road leading from Lexington to Versailles or to Winchester. One trip over a really good road would convert the most unreasonable opponent of good roads. In winter here it requires nearly an hour to make the trip to Index, a distance of two miles. We made the trip from Lexington to Frankfort, a distance of 28 miles, in forty-five minutes.

We again call the attention of our subscribers to the fact that a little money would be convenient now. Send in your renewal at once and save us the expense of sending out statements. We want to thank the many who responded to our last appeal, and to say to you that we will be grateful to you if you will send in your renewal at once. Sit down now and do so.

Just in passing, the editor of the Courier called attention to one or two of the West Liberty citizens who were with him in Lexington and Frankfort last week, to the absence of indications of drinking. True, there may be much drinking in those cities, but was not visible to the visitors from the outside. Prohibition has done this if nothing more. Yet, we frequently hear it said that there is as much drinking in the cities as formerly.

A TEAPOT TEMPEST

The introduction of the "Carbon Black" bill in the Senate has stirred up a hornet's nest. We have read the bill as amended and fail to see the necessity for the howl it raised, and yet it seems that it would have been less ambiguous had it stated in direct words that it prohibited the use of gas for carbon black. If there is a "nigger in the woodpile" in the bill, it is cleverly concealed.

IS THIS LOST IN THE SHUFFLE?

We have not been able to keep track of the school legislation in this session of the General Assembly. At the beginning it was said that the repeal of the law allowing the board to elect the superintendent was assured, but somehow it has had such an inconspicuous position in the news of that body's deliberation that it has escaped the eagle eye of our exchange reader. Let us hope that in its lucid intervals the Legislature will repeal this farcical law that was claimed to attain the impossible—a non-partisan measure.

MORGAN'S STRATEGIC POSITION.

In the scramble for the nominations for the various State offices in the next State election Morgan county occupies a position that gives her power in the selection of the nominees.

On a straight fight she has a majority of at least two thousand, and is the only safely Democratic county east of Montgomery. It is one county that can be depended upon to give its usual majority under even adverse circumstances. In a primary, even in a State primary, its Democratic vote is of sufficient volume to make it a factor in the choice of candidates.

This fact is respectfully referred to those politicians who will seek the Democratic nomination.

The Democracy of Morgan county is loyal to its friends, and, on the other hand, will line up solidly against those who work against her interests.

There are a few things that Morgan is asking at the hands of the Democrats now at Frankfort, and those who are her friends will find that she will rally to her friends. The Courier is keeping in touch with the situation and will tell its readers just how the boys line up.

THE ROAD BOND MUDDLE.

By hiding out to prevent the bill authorizing the issue of the road bonds being delivered him, Governor Morrow prevents the submission of the question to the voters this fall, unless the Senate majority accepts his proposal for a bi-partisan board.

On first thought, and in a hurriedly formed opinion, the Courier believes that the need for roads is sufficiently pressing to justify the Senate accepting the Governor's offer of compromise. In fact there is a wide-spread doubt as to whether the question would have met the approval of the people in the form that it was passed. The trouble is that the Republican politicians would have had an opportunity to stir up opposition on the ground that all the board was Democratic. The fact that the four men on the board are possibly the best that could have been selected from the State would have been lost sight of in a partisan campaign against it.

The compelling thought in the whole question is that the people want roads—want the State to finance their building by a bond issue—and that should not be overlooked in the settling of the matter. There could be no possible objection to the four men selected. It is admitted that there would have been effective and economical management of the road building under their supervision. However, in the present state of politics in Kentucky the Republican organization would have launched their campaign against the success of the bonds at the polls this fall. To have gained a party advantage they would have sacrificed the roads and delayed the construction of the roads for two years.

In accepting Governor Morrow's bi-partisan commission the Democrats will have shown the people that they can even overlook an unheard-of subterfuge to prevent legislation, and will have strengthened their position with the people. There is possibly no case on record where a governor of a State hid to prevent a bill being delivered to him.

When the bill to establish the two normal schools was introduced by the Republicans they were not so magnanimous toward the Democrats. Three men were named in it, and all three were Republicans. Two years ago when the Republicans had control of the legislature the Democrats got scant recognition, but now that the shoe is on the other foot they howl because they are given the same treatment they accorded the Democrats two years ago.

Still, we believe that it is not worth the cost of two years' delay in submitting the bond issue to pay them in their own coin. We hope that some way will be reached by which we can vote on the bond issue next November.

UGHT TO COME TO THIS BURG.

Mt. Sterling newspapers are gloating over the fact that that city is likely to have a sure-enough hotel. Before those fellows go to doing too much along that line they ought to come to West Liberty and find out how the thing is done. Or they might ask any traveling man who has put his feet under the tables of Jack Cole or Peck Kilgore. The Knights of the Grip are the best judges, and the way they plan to arrange their itinerary so as to reach West Liberty as often as possible proves that this town has the best hotels of any town in the State.

But that is to be expected, for this little burg prides itself on having the best of everything, and has. It is the cleanest, the town of no shabby buildings, and it is a delight to all who come here. And the building that has been recently erected would do credit to much larger places.

That is not all, but our advantages are too well known to need boosting, and that is the reason why we are going to land that Normal school.

OIL & GAS DEVELOPMENT.

The Ivyton Oil & Gas Company has been securing leases in this neighborhood for some time in the attempt to secure a block of sufficient size to justify the expenditure of the amount of money that a complete test of the requires, and the Courier has been told that they have accomplished the end desired and it is likely that drilling will begin soon. The territory comprises the lands lying lying on Long Branch, Spaw Creek and War Creek, the first named being just at the east edge of town.

The testing of this territory will set at rest the question of whether this is oil and gas territory, and the work of development will be watched with more than ordinary interest by our citizens. It is said that the first well ever drilled in this section—in the south part of town—was a producer, but at that time there was no pipe line near and it was allowed to ruin. Here's hoping that the test will be profitable to the contractors and to the citizens.

THAT OIL INSPECTOR.

The oil inspector for Kentucky drew $160,000 for his year's work (?). Of course that is not a very large sum, especially when compared with the stupendous sums received by country editors who work very little, but considering that the "ultimate consumer" pays it in increased prices on gasoline and oils, it is rather too much for something that is not needed. And that bird must be something of a politician, too, for he was created by the late Republican Legislature and the Democrats do not seem to be able to pry him loose from his fat plum.

Some day we are going to forgo reputation and go to the Kentucky Legislature just to get it fixed so that country newspaper men will draw enough from the public treasury to make their business self-supporting.

UGHT TO BE IN VODVIL.

Senator Reed, of Missouri, counts it a day ill spent when he does not secure front page position. His latest bid for newspaper notoriety is his designation of the Japanese as "black-skinned scoundrels." That the Jap is slippery and tricky and in many cases not to be trusted is admitted, but there must many of them who are worthy—at least, equal to the "Show-Me" Senator—or they would not be able to forge to the front with a rapidity that is startling the world. Besides, they are not black, but yaller.

But this theme will do Reed as well as any since his titterances no longer alarm or amuse.

GUMPTION

Our Motto: One country, one flag, one wife at a time.
Our Aim: To tell the truth though the heavens fall.
Our Hope: To cure cussedness or kill the cusses.

By L. T. HOVERMALE.

DID WASHINGTON HAVE A RED NOSE?

It has been many weeks since this column has had a place in these pages, and possibly many of you have forgotten that "Gumption" was supposed to adorn this great agent of moral uplift weekly. But there have been reasons why it could not. In the first place we have been crowded with matter—principally advertising—that no room could be found for this department, and second, it is difficult to produce the profound philosophy that characterizes this column when a fellow is struggling with normalcy in trying to make the income equal the outgo.

I suppose I ought to apologize for the title to this article, but I am not wholly responsible for it. Historians and biographers ought to be compelled to be more definite in these matters. Prof. Albert Bushnell Hart, of Harvard, started this thing, for I see in the dailies that he contends that Washington was both red headed and had a red nose. And as I am grinding out "copy" to keep the linotype busy for a few days while I go with a bunch of loyal West Liberty citizens to Frankfort to help convince the powers that be that our city is the only feasible location for the Normal school.

As I said before, if historians and biographers were compelled by law to have a care for details it would save the future generations much worry and annoyance. At the dinner table a few days ago some wise guy stated that he had seen it written in something that our beloved Thomas Jefferson was red headed. Of course none of us could start an argument, for even Bob Rankin and Walter Gardner are not old enough to remember very much about the personal appearance of the founder of Democracy, and the man who asserted that Tom was red headed had us at a disadvantage. There was no basis for an argument, for it is not argument to say that we had not read anything like that. Nor did the fellow give any of the writers specifications. He just said that it was written. Now, a few months ago when I stated that Eve was a blonde I gave my reasons for that belief. I didn't try to prove it by Bill Aller and Amos Howard that we remembered her and knew that she was a blonde. I left a fine field for argument.

But Prof Hart is more considerate. He quotes an alleged letter from one David Ackerson, of Alexandria, to prove his contention. And, furthermore, he says that the letter attributes the cause of the red nose to the usual habit that make the nasal organ luminous. But after this long time it would be easy to fake the letter as the other, and in common with those who believe implicitly in the cherry tree story I am going to brand the effort of the Harvard Professor as simply a challenge to the space writers and an effort to let about 110,000,000 people who had never heard of Prof. Hart know that such an erudite pedagogue existed. Otherwise he would never have been heard of out side his class room.

But back to the question of compelling historians to be accurate. There is a crying need for such a law. I think that every man should be compelled to have his picture made and published in the newspaper as often as once a year, and have the engraver to state on it the color of his eyes, the color of his hair, and give all the Bertillon measurements. Then when the historian assays the task of writing his biography he will have ample data to guide him. Think of the humiliation of the progeny of some good citizen whose head is adorned with wealth of chestnut hair to have some careless biographer to portray him as red headed. Or some man who prided himself on his brick colored thatch to be described as raven haired. And if my biographer should give it out to the public that I was bald I hope my heirs and assigns will sue him for slander. Nor does the color of the hair include all misrepresentations that might be heaped upon a man after he is dead, whether he is bow-legged or has big feet may all be has been dead a century. His height, the color of his the means of harassing his descendants even after the 4th or fifth generation.

In support of my demand for the law above referred to I am going to call your attention to some woe that might be entailed upon the people a few centuries from now by careless and inaccurate biographers. Suppose that in the year 2222 the biographer of Cleveland Allen should describe him as a short, stocky person, with red hair and a big bay window in front? I don't care how glorious a career Mr. Allen may have achieved, how many honors may have been heaped upon him, the carelessness of the biographer would spoil it all. After he has gone to the United States Senate, or become Attorney General of the nation, all this honor would be dismissed by the misstatement of the facts about his height or his weight.

Or, should Charley Prater's biographer picture him as a tall, lean, restless giant, with dark, piercing eyes and a wealth of raven hair, would it not dim the lustre of his life's achievements? Even though he should have been elevated to the Supreme Bench of the United States these careless biographers would rob him of all the glory and plunge his great-grandchildren in despair by the seemingly trivial misstatements about his personal appearance. Now nobody can be mistaken about Abe Lincoln. He was a farseeing man and had his picture made and put in the papers so that no space writer could slander him by misquoting the color of his hair. Even a Harvard professor would not have the temerity to call him red headed.

But in the absence of a law to protect us from the future biographers who are in danger of becoming great or famous should write our own biographies and include in it a minute description of ourselves, and have cuts made to print our pictures from while we live. I warn you that there is a great menace before us in the shape of future biographers. Not only might they err in telling about our personal appearance, but they might tell something about our career that we would rather not be printed. When biographers get so careless that they will state that a great statesman had red hair they might get careless enough not to leave out the record of events in our lives that we hope will die with us and be remembered no more.

What a beautiful story it would have been about Benedict Arnold if the biographers had stopped in the middle of it. Brutus would have been honored if the last part of his history had not been written. Egypt has her shame because fool biographers insisted on writing about other things connected with Cleopatra than her beauty, and Russia might not now be in the thrall of the bolsheviks if only a part of Catherine's history had been written. Unless we can have a law to curb them no man's glory is safe from the biographers. This law is a crying need and if Congress and the State legislatures will not protect us we will have to appeal to the town councils for relief.

People who write the life history of individuals ought to be very careful. In the years to come literary cusses will snore around and dig up things that will spoil the most beautifully written biography. The fact is that the American people are not sufficiently respectful to the hoary traditions concerning our great men, and many of the things I was taught as a boy are being denied by the ruthless iconoclasts. Some of the diggers into the past are claiming that there is no truth in the story of George and his little hatchet, and that Mr. Weems cribbed that story from an older biography that was possibly appropriated from one even earlier. So we find that nothing is sacred to those literary vandals. What if the story was not true? We have been taught to believe it and it is wrong to shatter our idols, and besides, it leaves us without the life of a truthful man to hang our history upon.

Suppose Washington was a "regular fellow" when a boy, lied like the very devil to escape punishment for youthful boyish pranks? He's dead now and it will do no good to prove that he was just an ordinary boy. I am glad that the denial of this story did not come in my youth, for it was the example of our illustrious first president that inculcated in me a love of truth and enabled me to adopt the calling of an editor—a class who always tell the truth. It is a shame to take from us our cherished idols. Anyway, I am going to hold my faith in the story of the cherry tree. It was so like my early boyhood that I can readily believe it. And to prevent any mistakes I am going to write my own biography and have it copyrighted so that in centuries to come no scribbling cuss can malign me.

Finally, I warn all of you who expect to have your biography adorn the pages of history to make sure that the lustre of your glory will not be dimmed by some future college shark by playing safe. Have the police take your measurements; leave all data possible concerning your personal appearance; furnish the newspapers your picture. This will save your progeny many hours of anguish. Think of the descendants of George Washington now who are grieving over their inability to establish the fact that he was not red-headed! Or, that he did not have a red nose; or if he had a red nose, that its redness was due to natural causes. The fact that George did not leave any descendants don't make any difference—it's the principle of the thing that counts. Biographers should be taught that it may lead to deplorable results if they are not more careful in their work. If Weems had not been so anxious to hand down to us the example of a boy who couldn't tell a lie, we might have been saved the controversy about the color of his nose.

Since the above was written I have returned from my visit to Frankfort an dfind that even more "copy" is required, and I am trying to fill out the space requirements. And just to inform you who have not been down to Frankfort during the biennial meet of the Kentucky Legislature, I want to tell you that our Senator, Dr. J. D. Whiteaker, is "some pumpkin" in that body. He is probably as influential a member as the Senate contains. Quiet, assiduous and untiring, with a character that is recognized on both sides of the chamber he holds a position of importance and enjoys the confidence of the whole body. Any member of the Senate will rely upon what he tells them, and it is his sterling character that gives him his prominence as a legislator. He is equal in ability, too, of any of them, and as a member of the Rules Committee he is one of the most important members of the Senate.

Clifford May, in the House, is making a faithful member, and has the confidence of his fellow members. D. G. Lacy, Sergeant at Arms, fills his office with dignity and credit, and was especially nice to the Morgan county delegation. Morgan county is not suffering at Frankfort by reason of the men whom we have entrusted with our affairs there, and all of them will have a story to unfold when they get back. It has been a momentous session and our boys have acquitted themselves very creditably, and I hope that no future biographer of either of them will dig up anything in the coming centuries that will cause their posterity to tear its hair.

This makes about all the space I can use for this time.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.

All persons who have claims to file with the Fiscal Court at the April term will have to file them 10 days before the court convenes. The law requires the county attorney to investigate these claims before he O. K's them, and no claim will be considered by the court that is not filed ten days before the court convenes.

All claims have to be sworn to, and no claim will be considered that is not properly verified.
